Vicki Ambinder is a music producer, performance coach, and artistic consultant based in Portland, Oregon.

Vicki has been a producer for 20 years, working in a variety of media including film, radio and music. She also has enjoyed decades of experience as a performer, bandleader, songwriter, arranger, and director – in other words, she has worn many hats, and they all contribute to her skill set in helping musicians bring out the best in their recorded material.

As a performance coach and artistic consultant, Vicki can guide artists in a wide range of areas such as style, interpretation, technique, sequencing, visuals, arrangements, paffer, staging, and more – focusing on the big picture or the finest detail, whatever may be needed. She believes that making a short-term investment in these areas can pay off in the long run, and that sometimes it takes a fresh set of eyes and ears to pinpoint what can help an act reach its fullest potential.

Vicki works with solo artists as well as bands, with experience levels ranging from beginner to long-time professional. Contact Vicki for a free initial consultation.
